

Description of the Department of Letters and Foreign Languages and of the Undergraduate Study Programme “Romanian Language and Literature – A Modern Language and Literature (English, Japanese)”

The Department of Letters and Foreign Languages, an integral part of the Faculty of Social, Humanistic and Natural Sciences, represents an essential academic center dedicated to education and research in the field of philology through a comprehensive, coherent, diversified, and contemporary educational offer adapted to the requirements of a knowledge-based society and intercultural communication.

In accordance with the institutional mission and the objectives of the study programme “Romanian Language and Literature – A Modern Language and Literature (English, Japanese)”, the department provides the necessary framework for achieving a solid academic education in the field of philology. Its teaching and research activities are directed toward the development of students’ linguistic, literary, and intercultural competences, while also fostering critical, autonomous, and creative thinking.

The choice you have made by enrolling in the Preparatory Year Programme in Romanian Language for Foreign Citizens is an honor for us and reflects the trust you have placed in our academic community. It represents both a source of satisfaction and a meaningful responsibility. We strive to become your academic partners and to guide you throughout your professional and intellectual development.

The present guide is intended to accompany you throughout your academic journey within the chosen field of study and to assist you in understanding the structure and administration of university life. At the same time, it represents our first message of welcome:

“Welcome, dear students!”

We wish you every success in your academic and personal endeavors!
